John Arnholz, a senior partner at the D.C. office of the Bingham firm, is probably the leading attorney in D.C. in the field of structured finance and specifically Collateralized Mortgage Bonds (CMO). The decline of the value of CMO’s played a major role in accelerating the financial crises of 2007-2008. But, now CMO’s are back…with a vengeance. What has changed? Are the safeguards adopted by the Dodd Frank Act in 2012 satisfactorily in place. Are these safeguards sufficient to help deter another financial crises.

Reception to follow in atrium
