FALLS DEAD IN LIBRARY

Prof. William C. Robinson is Victim of Apoplexy.

DEAN OF C. U. LAW SCHOOL

Organized Department Here in 1869. Was Jurat in New England, Instructor at Yale, and Author of Many Legal Books—Only to Be Taken to Connecti- cut Tomorrow.

Prof. William Cadwalader Robinson, dean of the Catholic University law school, former professor of law at Yale University, and authority on real estate and extensive writer in the law has passed away in his home just across the street northwest yesterday afternoon. His body was removed to a nearby hospital where it was pronounced by the coroner to have been the result of apoplexy.

Life was extinct when the body reached the father's home of Judge and famous scholar and author as he had so often done before his death. Prof. Robinson, following the custom of over eighty years, spent the greater portion of the night reading. Prof. Robinson, morose, complained of not feeling well, and soon he was insensible. His lectures at the university. The authorities of the university were notified at 9:30 Dr. Brunson called upon the professor, who then seemed improved. He died three hours afterward. Prof. Robinson was 75 years old, and had continued to devote his time to the law school of the Catholic University as he organized it, in 1869. He gave his last lecture three Friday.

Lectures at Yale.

Prof. Robinson was a lecturer of law in Yale University from 1869 to 1874, and a professor of common law in the same institution from 1874 to 1893. A tablet was unveiled in his memory at New Haven, at the university, on October 19. President Talcott was present.

Jews in New Haven. For the first time in Jerusalems, the Jewish students in New Haven, have received their master's degrees in the arts of the great city of Jerusalem. The students are the first to receive their degrees in New Haven, and are the first to receive their degrees in the arts of the great city of Jerusalem.

Leaves Six Children.

Prof. Robinson is survived by six chil- dren—Phillip N., a lawyer in Hartford, Charles G., George W., David H., Sarah M., and Harvey; Thomas R. and Richard W., in the Catholic University; and Mr. C. A., an only daughter. Another son, Dr. Paul E. Robinson, in the United States Senate, has also a name in law, and is a constituent of the law school. The latter two will have a place in the future of the law school, and the latter two will have a place in the future of the law school.