

Thomas Archer is a third-year law student at the Catholic University of America, Columbus School of Law. He currently serves as the President of the Securities Law Students Association, the student affinity group for the Securities Law Program. Last year, Thomas, along with his teammates, represented the law school in the Kaufman Securities Law Moot Court Competition. This year, he will help coach CUA's team. Thomas has held two internship positions with the Securities and Exchange Commission: once with the Division of Enforcement's Whistleblower Office and once with the Division of Investment Management's Disclosure Review and Accounting Office. Currently, Thomas is interning with the Investment Company Institute, where he assists the Institute's attorneys on a wide variety of initiatives, including ESG, fund valuation and liquidity, equity market structure reform, derivatives issues and CFTC rulemaking, digital assets, and OFAC sanctions.